The 16th Annual Kleiman Creative Writing Contest is coming up!

To shake up our 16th year of the Kleiman Creative Writing Contest and get kids excited about writing early in the contest season, we will be hosting a visit by a special author before the end of the year. We’re Featuring “Unique” Books on Facebook

Our library does its best to keep the popular books coming. Nora Roberts, John Green, Mo Willems...we all have our favorites. But we have been scouring the shelves of the Kendallville Public Library and others in the Evergreen Indiana system to find books that are a little strange...a little gross...and very funny.

Farts: A Spotter’s Guide is one such book. It’s a little weird, but it’s very helpful. Everyone tries to hide the fact that they've farted, but the tactics people use are all a bit different. This book will help you pinpoint who dealt it every time. What a great skill to have!

As we were saying, we’ve found lots of odd books in Evergreen Indiana. Thirty one of them, in fact. We’ll be featuring them every day during October on the library’s Facebook page at www.facebook.com/kendallvillepubliclibrary. And good news - you don't even need a Facebook account to view them. The best news of all, though, is that each of these books is available through Evergreen Indiana. That's right...you can check out Farts: A Spotter's Guide (that one is on our shelves at KPL) or any of our other featured books.
It’s a Tiger!
By David LaRochelle
Illustrated by Jeremy Tankard

It’s a Tiger! is an action-packed, exciting romp through the jungle. The book opens with the narrator offering to tell the readers a story. He begins to weave a tale about monkeys swinging in the treetops when, out of the corner of his eye, he spies a long striped tail that definitely does not belong to a monkey. From there the narrator guides the readers through the jungle, telling them to “push aside those vines” and “climb that ladder.” But at every turn, the tiger is waiting, cleverly hidden.

This book is incredibly fun to read, and much like We’re Going on a Lion Hunt, it takes the reader on a journey full of action and surprise. The repeated refrain of “A TIGER!” will have kids laughing and guessing when and where the tiger will turn up next. The colorful, cheery illustrations make sure the pouncing, climbing, jumping tiger is never too scary or fierce, so younger readers have nothing to fear.

There Was a Tree
By Rachel Isadora

Based on a classic song from 1912 of the same name, There Was a Tree is a wonderful book about a tree growing in a hole in the ground and all the things that can be found in, on, and around that tree.

The book is essentially told in verses of the song, with each verse building on the previous verse, making it easy for kids to memorize and repeat the lines. The repeated refrain of “the green grass grew all around” is also easy to remember and it gives kids a chance to participate in the story. The story uses rebuses (pictures that represent words), making it ideal for children just learning to read on their own.

Isadora places the story in Africa and the mixed illustrations of wild animals and the vast expanse of the savanna are beautiful and vibrant. Sheet music and lyrics for the original song are included in the book.

The Book Thief
By Markus Zusak

The Gravedigger’s Handbook. Sounds morbid, right? After finding The Gravedigger’s Handbook in the snow, Liesel’s next task is to learn how to read. This moment began her lifelong love of words and reading.

Liesel is a young girl ripped away from everything she knows. Growing up in Germany during World War II, she struggles to understand the world around her. What she doesn’t know is that she has captivated Death’s interest.

The Book Thief is narrated from Death’s point of view. When Death speaks, it’s time to listen.
